Excerpt: . attendance constituted themselves into a definite association. With an account of this event the first Journal book of the Royal Society opens. r Memorandum November 28, 1660. These persons following, according to the usual custom of most of them, met together at Gresham College, to hear Mr. Wren s lecture.<sup>1</sup> And after the lecture was ended they did according to usual manner withdraw for mutual converse. Where amongst other matters that were discoursed of, something was offered about a design of founding a college for the promoting of Physicomathematical Experimental Learning; and because they had these frequent occasions of meeting with one another, it was proposed that some course might be thought of, to improve this meeting to a more regular way of debating things, and according to the manner in other countrys where there were voluntary associations of men in academies for the advancement of various parts of learning, so they might do something answerable here for the promotion of experimental philosophy.<sup>2</sup> They agreed to meet Wednesday at Mr. Rooke s chamber at Gresham College, and in vacation at Mr. Ball s chamber. Dr. Wilkins was appointed chairman, and a list of forty-one persons, judged willing and fit to join with them in their design was drawn up. On the Wednesday following the opening entry of the journal-book. Sir Robert Moray, who was called the soul of the meetings and represented the connecting link between the King and the scientists, brought word...
