Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In 1958, the Government of Canada, with joint co-operation with the United States government, flooded over a 30 mile stretch of land in Eastern Ontario along the St Lawrence River in order to create a newly formed body of water, Lake St. Lawrence. The flooding was necessary in order to allow large ocean going vessels access through the previously difficult to navigate waters from Cornwall to Morrisburg along the St. Lawrence River in through to inland cities such as Toronto, Detroit and Chicago. The massive project involved the displacement of over 6500+ people including 7 villages, 3 hamlets and numerous farms in a stretch of communities that had been established in the early development of Ontario s history. While swimming in the Lake St. Lawrence in in the present day, a precocious 10 year old boy named Art discovers the foundation of an old home on the bottom of the lake. He notices a trap door set into the top of the foundation and forces it open. Strangely, he is able to see through the trap door into a well lit, dry room below. As he tries to get a better view down through the trap door, he loses his grip and falls to the floor in the basement. He has landed through a temporal doorway into 1958 though that is only revealed to him as the adventure develops. The discovery of the doorway leads Art to a journey through time as he meets the inventor of the doorway, a physicist named Roger Haines, and a couple of other children that he befriends in 1958 and shares a magical three days with. The story then...
